Environment and sustainability have long become part of the curriculum content in many schools including kindergartens. We are living on a plastic planet; water, land and air are extremely polluted. We need to conserve and restore the nature, we need to protect it. Our children need to get outside and engage with nature. They need to experience it directly so that they can also experience themselves.

She started thinking that if grown-ups didn't do anything for their future, then children should do something.

Children were the ones who would live in that future.

Very few people had the courage and the chance to change the course of events in history. Ghandi was one of them. Rosa Parks was another. But for the first time, a teenager stood up.

Greta Thunberg started with small steps, sitting in front of the Swedish Parliament and later skipping schools on every Friday in order to demand action on climate crisis. In time, she inspired millions of young people and adults around the world to take to the streets to demand the same.

Greta's Voice is the real story of the 16-year-old climate activist, a story that will give hope to people of all ages and prove to children that they don't need to wait becoming a grown up to make a difference.

Greta's is a story of persistence and inspiration, a wake up call for us all. We hope we will stop the climate crisis altogether.

This is an ABC alphabet book series on endangered species of animals and plants, as well as cities whose existence is at risk due to human actions.

The variety of animals and plants is very important for the life on our planet. What would happen if humankind continues to disturb the natural balance in a way that endangers species forever? Pollution, hunting and our other actions are speeding up this dangerous and destructive process. Too many species are in danger now. We need to give attention and help them.

In addition to plants and animals, cities that are close to seas are also in danger now. Many cities such as Amsterdam will be flooded in case of a rise in the sea levels as a result of climate change.

Sunfish and Moonlight

Lisa Aarden      Oksana Bula

Sunfish and Moonlight has received great praise from various publishers. The story is quite original for children's books, as it touches on immigration. The illustrations, which bring together the oceans and the sky, are very charming and will definitely attract your attention.

Sunfish and Moonlight

Lisa Aarden

Illustrated by
Oksana Bula

225 x 225 mm

32 Pages

ISBN: 978-619-7458-01-5

Publication Date: Oct. 2018

Sunfish and Moonlight are two big-hearted sea creatures who love each other and who want to have a family. But the water where they live is too warm and they cannot spawn their babies. They decide to leave their home and go on an extraordinary adventure to a place where the water is colder. Straight from the tales told by Sunfish's mother, the North Star becomes their compass on a journey where they not only fight with hostile fish but escape from humans hunting them from big ships. Despite ongoing concerns about the seas' rising temperatures, they avoid all dangers and eventually spawn a family of many babies.

Explaining global climate change to young children is by far one of the most challenging tasks an adult can face. A contemporary fable of love and adventure for young children, Sunfish and Moonlight creates awareness of global warming and its effects on the environment. The environmental message in Sunfish and Moonlight is funny and powerful, yet simple enough to engage children and trigger their curiosity to investigate more on global warming. Children instantly connect with the innocent quest of Sunfish and Moonlight and enjoy watching them work through this problem and solve it in their own way.

About the Writer and the Illustrator Arianna Milesi

Born in Bergamo, Italy in 1982, Arianna graduated from Byzantine Art and Visual Arts in Milan. She often uses paper, wood, fabric, threads, and living organisms in her drawings and interactive installations. She loves light and suspended atmospheres where well established concepts can be explored freely, even through unconscious associations. Her predilection for the art of drawing did not prevent her from expanding her interests and developing her skills to include music and literature into her works.

This fantastic story is about the adventurous journey of two different creatures from two different species.

Our children are very familiar with animal stories, but these classic fairy tales implant so many prejudices in our children. Let's knock down these prejudices together.

Animals live in a world that is free of these thoughts. Now, in our story, a flamingo and a frog are cousins. Isn't that beautiful?

We are setting off on a journey of extraordinary animal friendships. The new century needs new fairy tales because change is everywhere.

Our main goal is to make reading a fun activity. Helping us to achieve this goal are the wonderful animals in our books, and you, our readers' parents. Together, we can tell stories that teach our children far more than can be found in a book that is strictly educational. Children like reading the same book again and again. At Dixi Books, we publishing stories that you will also enjoy reading again. Every time you turn a page, new discoveries are there to be made.

This story is about a little kid, a diver, who can talk to fish and understand them. At Dixi Books, it is very common that a child talks with sea creatures.

Another interesting thing about this book is that it brings different time periods together. In this way, the mind of the reader works like a time-machine, jumping from one period to another.

The fish, with whom our little diver becomes friends, invites him to a museum. He triggers the diver's interest and encourages him to go there. The story touches upon curiosity and exploration.

Children, as well as adults, love seas. For this reason, this book can be an interesting read for everyone. Who knows, maybe adults will also go to museums after reading this book.

However, the bookworm Bobby establishes a different relationship with animals, one which is deeper than simply throwing a stick to a dog or dragging a string around a cat. He reads a book and starts to cure little animals in his neighbourhood with the use of homeopathy. Bobby's journey of helping the ones in need for a better community will nurture the feeling of empathy with children and hopefully bring to life the knowledge of herbal medicine in your home.

About the Writer Alex de Kauzo

There is nothing as pleasurable as writing books for children. It's the best thing I have ever done in my life. Their energy and joy uplift my life and are invaluable to me. It is important to think about and also to write about soil and seeds. It is precious to foster the imaginary worlds of children, as they are the ones who make life worthwhile.

And so, I will continue to write for children. I devote these texts, which give my life such meaning, to all the children of the world.

About the Writer Ralph Weder

Ralph Weder was born in Berlin. He completed his primary education in a forest school where he was introduced to the basic principles of ecology such as compost, mulch, and permaculture. Following university, he worked as a teacher in several different schools. His main issue during his time as a teacher was the lack of quality books available to introduce to his students. Finally, he took a pen to his hand and a piece of paper and started to write children's books himself. Interactive learning, events in nature, and inviting everybody into ecological activities, constituted the orbit of life.

About the Illustrator Virginia Elena Patrone

Virginia Elena Patrone was born in Italy in 1985. An artist, author and illustrator, her works have been presented in various museums and galleries throughout Italy. She has lived in multiple countries, but now resides in a village in Anatolia. Her interests include the political food approach, and sustainable and traditional architecture techniques – which she has written a book about. Her articles on matriarchal societies and philosophy have also been published in numerous Italian magazines. She writes and illustrates books based on the present unknown and uncommon perspectives of life.

The Ecological Community enables your children to become aware of their capability and their power to produce solutions to the problems they face ranging from the lack of a volleyball field in the neighbourhood to climate change.

Neighbourhood friends Sophia, Jack, Lily, Nick, Mila, Leo and Nora work together to build an ecological café by paying attention to every living thing in their community. They sometimes seek help from their neighbours, sometimes from the fire fighters or the police station or chat with the elderly people around and by this way they learn, grow, share and collect the money required to reach their goal of opening a café by helping each other and working together. The book refers to ecological fundamentals such as natural food, recycling, composting, and saving, and it also enables the children to produce their own solutions and ideas by making them a part of the process.

Our home is beautiful only when all of us are in it. Our presence creates a sense of feeling. The more parents and children cooperate and the more they make joint decisions, the happier and more peaceful home becomes.

In order to transfer this feeling to children, this book combines words and images by using an extraordinary metaphor. It aims to create awareness about our home.

A book in which the level of excitement increases and so do hope and awareness in parallel. Another extraordinary creation of us which is in accordance with our publishing policy, is hitting the shelves!

About the Writer Julie Anderson

Julie Anderson is the oldest of 7 children and has always loved writing and poetry. She recalls her mother being concerned that she read so much, she never came out of her room.

As a youth worker for children with special needs, Julie has been around children her whole life. She really enjoys entertaining them with her silly rhymes and made up stories. Julie has 3 daughters which have inspired her to publish books for younger children. She is now in demand as a speaker in many schools nationally. She loves to combine those presentations with music and dance, her two favourite hobbies.

About the Illustrator Giulia Orsetti

Giulia Orsetti was born in Rome, Italy in 1994. Ever since she was a child, she's had a passion for drawing that, growing up, has become increasingly important. She attended Istituto Statale d'Arte Roma where she graduated with a specialization in architecture. Afterwards, she enrolled in the Scuola Romana dei Fumetti where she studied the techniques of comics, illustration, painting, and digital colouring. She is a freelance illustrator, colourist, and comic artist. Moreover, she loves Japan, tiramisu, writing stories inspired by her dreams, and reading books.

How is it possible for a tiny little bird to peck a hole in the trunk of a huge tree? With ten hits per second, and force 100 times stronger than gravity, woodpeckers are one of the most interesting and inspiring members of the bird kingdom. They use their magnificent beaks and amazing strength to hammer holes in trees -and that's where they make their nests. Woodpecker couples are a great example of solidarity. Males and females work together to build a nest and gather food, and males share in the duty of sitting on their eggs. They provide us with an opportunity to rethink all that is around us.

In this new century, libraries are full of books containing new ideas and the embracing value of solidarity. The Woodpeckers Cooperative is a modern fairy tale about the danger of failing to prepare for winter - as well as the importance of community and cooperation. A good children's story should catch a child's full attention. At Dixi Books, capturing a child's imagination is our priority and our promise.

What is the one thing you least expect to experience when you wake up in the morning? Waking up on the kitchen table? Waking up to find out that you wetted your bed? No, no! Emma's situation is a little different. One morning, Emma wakes up to find that something unimaginable has happened to her. There are bumps on both sides of her head, and soon they grow into antlers like seeds growing into a plant! She needs to find out how this difference will make her “cooler.”

The Girl with Antlers is the story of a child who faces the thing that makes her different and comes to accept it. At first, Emma won't leave the house because of the antlers that have grown on her head. However, her grandpa's wise words make her change her mind. This is a story that makes us question what is “normal” and tells us how our differences can transform us into more colourful and compassionate people.

In fairy tales, it's usually easy to guess what animals will do, or who they will befriend. But this fairy tale is different.

A young wolf decides to leave the pack, the only home she has ever known. She wants to leave so badly, but how will she manage on her own? The adventurous young wolf has positive experiences as well as negative ones, but she never loses heart. As she navigates her new life, she discovers the graces of the forest, and makes friends with other unexpected animals.

The best part of Young Wolf is that its ending is another beginning. It is our hope that children will continue the story with ideas of their own, which can be written in a special reserved section at the end of the Teaching Materials.

Let us see how the story continues...

Edu is eight years old, four feet tall and weighs 53 pounds. Like most other children, he loves chocolate bread, climbing trees and stopping by his famous candy store for the great smell.

Edu does not like pepper, or cola, or the sound of flies crashing against the window of his bedroom. He is restless, a dreamer, intrepid, energetic, a little impatient and very, very magical. Edu usually plays inside the house. Every day, after lunch, he dismantles the kitchen chairs to build very complicated structures, which he covers with tablecloths that turn them into castles, skyscrapers or houses with a garden.

Because Edu, above all, wants to be an architect. That is why he sets out to investigate in past times, to help him discover the keys to good design. A search that will take us to know the landmarks of architecture, while immersing us in the challenge of finding the best house in the world.

Melissa Salvarani is an Italian illustrator who lives in Madrid. She was 5 years old when they gave her the first package of crayons and from that moment she always designed. She loves the colours, all the possible shades, the collage, the material and irregular surfaces. She studied art and graphics and graduated in editorial illustration at the IED in Milan. She has always prospered at the intersection of creativity, fashion, and technology. In 2010 she created the BonbonsLab brand, whose purpose is to recover old furnishing accessories that are made unique with tailor care, giving it new life; recycling is as important as respect for the environment. She resumed illustrating full time from 2017, when she moved to Madrid. This colourful and lively city is a continuous source of inspiration. Illustrating books for children is a source of joy for her, each story is the creation of a magical world to illustrate.

The Inca civilization is an ancient culture whose disappearance is a source of sadness for everyone with a conscience. The amazing cities they built on majestic mountains, the pumas they held as holy, their gold and all other sources of wealth, were sadly swept away from the stage of history.

However, our story turns back the hands of time to go on an adventure with Acila, the tenacious young daughter of the city's greatest architect. When everyone turns a deaf ear to her, she does what all other successful people do: she thinks carefully, applies reason, then takes action.

The happy ending occurs deep in the woods - Acila is so proud, her smile beams. Dixi Books' Architecture Series presents beautiful stories that encourage children to get excited about history and to learn about historical artifacts.

Read one or read them all. You never know what is there to be discovered!

Losing touch with nature can cause unhappiness and anxiety. We feel this deep inside whenever we stop rushing and take a breath.

We are not alone...

In ancient Babylon, the queen feels the same disconnection with nature. Sensing his wife's melancholy the king wants to cheer her and so starts an incredible project: the Hanging Gardens of Babylon. However, the key to the king's dream lies in the hands of a small girl whose father is the greatest architect in all of Babylon. It's up to her to convince her father to help the king achieve his dream of building the greatest garden the world has even seen.

The Architecture Series by Dixi Books opens the pages of history. This fun and enlightening story draws young readers into the past while never losing sight of the present. After all, all story is born from history.

About the Writer Sarah Mahfoudh

Sarah is an author and editor from Oxfordshire, England, with a BA in English Literature and Theatre Studies and lifelong love affair with books. Having lived in fairyland for most of her life, Sarah thinks it's only right she should share her adventures with the rest of the world. She is the author of Middle Grade fantasy novel, Faces in the Water, and the popular illustrated children's book, Lilly Mae.

This book, The Twelve Dancing Princesses, was inspired by her two funny and forthright little girls who love to dance and dream but do not love being told what to do!

Quote from the book:

Yet, for all their differences, there was one thing the twelve sisters had in common: they all loved to dance; and this – as you will soon learn – was a problem for their father, King Norman. Norman was the worst dancer anyone had ever, EVER seen. He couldn't even do a step-together-step-touch and a finger snap without tripping over his own feet and ending up on his bottom. So it made him jealous and sad and a little bit mad to see his daughters dance so well. He tried his best to keep his feelings to himself, but he didn't always succeed.

The Twelve Dancing Princesses – The True Story

Perhaps you've heard the classic fairytale about the twelve dancing princesses; the version told by stuffy old men from the olden days who thought it was okay to lock princesses up in towers and marry them off to strangers. Well, the stuffy old men got it wrong. Here's what really happened...

Meet the twelve high-spirited princesses of Feather Castle. They enjoy science and magic, motor-bikes and clothes, music and saving the world – oh and they REALLY love to dance. But when spies in the shape of aspiring suitors visit the castle to discover where they go at night, the headstrong sisters won't stand for it. They soon have their guests outwitted in this hilarious story of royal disasters, pixie-loving dragons, magical gardens, contests and friendship.

Our closest friends are the people we trust the most. We tell them our secrets and share our lives with them.

But, what happens if our friends and our secrets turn against us? Jenna's Truth, inspired by Amanda Todd's tragic story of bullying, is a book that tells us what can happen when we discover our friends are no longer who we think they are.

The internet age offers many opportunities and makes life easier, but it also put us in great danger. Every post creates a digital trail that can't always be erased.

Nadia L. King has woven together a contemporary teenage story, a lesson of empathy and self-awareness, and a tale about the dangers of digital life to create a book that is utterly captivating. Jenna's Truth is both bleak and full of hope.

This is the extraordinary story of how one small girl stopped a planetary catastrophe. It's a very timely book, written for the child in us all, with a forceful message about the power of young people to transform the world - a theme currently demonstrated by brave young heroes like Greta Thunberg. And with magical synchronicity, the very week Greta began her lone vigil outside the Swedish government last year, over 1,000 miles (1,897 km) away in the fictional world of books, Amelie Trott took to Parliament Square, London - on a mission to avert the End of the World.

It's a family drama with an international feel - set mainly in England but with episodes in Washington DC and around the world.

Teaching Materials

Each book in Dixi has teaching materials related to its topic and story. Teaching materials are aimed at elevating knowledge from the comprehension level to the level of practice.

They are made up of two parts.

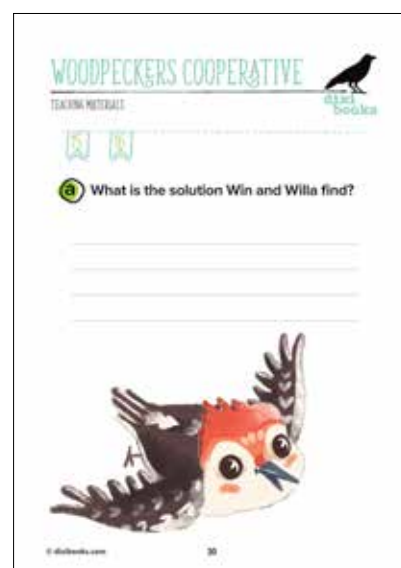

The first part has questions about the story. These questions are aimed at raising children's curiosity, drawing their attention to the details of the story and, most importantly, evoking a feeling of empathy. The questions will make the readers to relate to main characters and develop empathy towards them.

The second part of the teaching materials is an activity pack. Here you can find activities related to the story. The activity pack, first of all, is aimed at bringing children's thoughts about the story into a real life.

Teachers and parents can access teaching materials for free by scanning a QR code on the back cover of our books.
